

FOUR MEN KILLED BY MONON TRAIN

FLYER HITS SURREY AT CROSSING AT ELLETTSVILLE AND VICTIMS ARE HURLED TO DEATH—GLASS BLOWERS RETURNING HOME FROM BLOOMINGTON AT MIDNIGHT FAIL TO SEE DANGER.

BODY ON ENGINE'S PILOT

ELLETTSVILLE, Ind., March 19, 3 a. m.—Four men were killed instantly this morning one mile and a half southwest of here in this (Monroe) county when a surrey, in which they were returning to this town from Bloomington was struck by a fast mail train on the Monon railroad and shattered. The dead are: JESSE ROGERS, 25 years old, ARCHIE FARLER, 27 years old, MARTIN ("WHITE EYE") WARDEN, 22 years old, EMMETT WILLIAMS, 20 years old.

The four men were glass blowers, who worked at a glass factory at Spencer, Ind., and boarded at the home of Mrs. Charles McNeeley at Ellettsville.

Run Down at Crossing.

They left Ellettsville early in the evening and went to Bloomington, where, it is said, they spent part of the night drinking. They were driving a team, attached to a surrey, and left Bloomington about 10 o'clock last night.

The men reached a grade crossing a short distance below Ellettsville and evidently did not see Monon train No. 4, which left Bloomington at 12:27 o'clock, approaching at a high rate of speed. The train struck the buggy squarely and splintered it.

Victims Hurled Into Air.

The impact threw three of the men high into the air, while the body of a fourth, that of young Warden, landed on the pilot of the engine. It was found there by the train crew after the train reached Ellettsville.

The train was sent back to the crossing and the crew found the other three men lying at the side of the track. The bodies were put aboard the train and brought to this city.

The four men had been in Ellettsville only a short time, it is said, and little was known about them. The buggy in which they were riding was reduced to splinters, but the horses escaped unhurt. They were found a short distance away from where the accident occurred.

WILL POOL THEIR EGGS.

Farmers Prepare to Strike Blow at the Middlemen, and Benefit Consumer.

Farmers of the state are preparing to strike at the middleman, by organizing egg circles, which, it is said, have been accomplishing something for the farmer and ultimate consumer in the northwestern states. The plan is for twenty or thirty farmers in a community to form a pool for the marketing of eggs. Every farmer in the circle has a number and this number goes on each egg put in the pool. This enables testers to trace the bad eggs back to their first owners.

The shipments are sent direct to Indianapolis or other large markets and the farmers get the profits that, under the present plan, go to the hucksters and country shippers. If this plan works, and it has worked elsewhere, according to reports the farmers receive, the ultimate consumer may say good-bye to two classes of middle-men. The organization of these egg circles also extends into the part of Illinois that contributes to the Indianapolis market.

Middlemen are already quoted as having told the farmers: "If you won't sell us eggs, we'll not buy your poultry, but Indianapolis dealers have assured the farmers that they will take the poultry as well as the eggs and will supply farmers with coops in which to make shipments.—Sullivan Times.

UP TO YOU TO PAY TAXES

UNDER THE NEW LAW TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES ARE FURNISHED WITH A STATEMENT OF DELINQUENT TAXES, AND WILL COLLECT THEM.

WHEN OPPORTUNITY OFFERS

The men who seek employment from township trustees on township work and to furnish township supplies will be deprived of opportunity to escape paying taxes. Under the provisions of the new law the township trustees are authorized to deduct from amounts due to individuals from the township treasury, any taxes such individuals may owe for taxes in the county, and will be presented with a tax receipt instead of an order on the county treasurer.

This law was passed by the Legislature in 1911 that makes it the duty of the county auditor to prepare a list of delinquent taxpayers in each township and certify the names and amounts owing to the different township trustees that is to be a part of the record in the trustee's office. It is then made the duty of the trustee to know who are delinquent and when any account is presented to the trustee for payment, the trustee shall first see if any delinquent taxes are owing by the party and if any he must deduct the amount of tax from what the township owes him and pay the balance by order.

The trustee will then make return to the auditor of money thus held out and it will find its way to the county treasurer and the part that goes back to the township will come to it finally.

It is probable that the Ben Greet Players may be in Greencastle for an engagement the week proceeding the university commencement week. The university has made a proposition to the manager and expects to hear from him within a few days.

Mr. Brattin is an extensive shipper of Putnam county furs and already this year has shipped more than $5,300 worth of furs to the New York market. Mr. Brattin stated this afternoon that the catch this year had been exceptionally large and predicted that unless the Legislature soon passes a law shortening the season for trapping furbearing animals in Indiana, the supply would be exhausted within a few years.

MANY WILL GO TO THE CONVENTION

INTEREST AMONG DEMOCRATS OF PUTNAM COUNTY IN NOMINATION OF STATE CANDIDATES IS GREAT—RALSTON SURE OF NOMINATION.

EXPECT A GREAT CROWD

One of the largest delegations to ever attend a state convention in Indianapolis is expected to leave here tomorrow and Thursday to attend the Democratic convention to be held in Tomlinson hall, Thursday.

Many Democrats from all parts of the county will go to Indianapolis to attend the convention, which will nominate the ticket, which surely will be elected at the polls next fall.

Since there is no opposition to Samuel Ralston for the nomination for Governor, the Lebanon man, will have a unanimous convention in his favor. Most of the interest now is in the selection of National convention delegates and the candidates for the minor state offices.

Many from Putnam county will go to Indianapolis tomorrow to get a line on the political news before the convention is called to order. There is a determined spirit in Putnam county against the selection of Crawford Fairbanks of Terre Haute as a National convention delegate. Mr. Fairbanks is making a fight for election but it is hardly possible that he will be chosen. James L. Randal of Greencastle, Attorney McFadden of Rockville, and George Brill of Danville, are being prominently mentioned in connection with the National delegate election, and two of these men probably will be chosen.

Addresses will be made by Congressman Korbly, Senator Shively, Governor Marshall and the Democratic candidate for governor, who will be nominated at the state convention. The tickets will be $2.50 apiece and the banquet will be held at the beautiful new Hume-Mansur roof garden. The number of tickets will be limited to 1,000 and as the tickets will all be numbered, none will be sold over that amount.

TAFT MEN TO BANK ON THE STUDENTS

CALL FOR MEETING OF UNIVERSITY BOYS WEDNESDAY NIGHT AT WHICH S. A. HAYS AND THOMAS T. MOORE WILL MAKE ADDRESSES.

CALL TO ATTEND PRIMARY

In order that they may be sure to defeat the Roosevelt supporters at the mass convention, at which the local Republicans will elect their delegates to the state and district conventions, the Taft Republicans are organizing the De Pauw students and are urging them to attend the convention Friday and help elect the Taft delegates.

A meeting of the Taft students has been called for Wednesday night and Thomas T. Moore and S. A. Hays, two of the most prominent Taft supporters will address them.

It is arranged that the college band shall head a parade of college boys in march from the campus to the court house Friday afternoon and that all of the college boys shall vote for the Taft candidates. This looks just a little like the Taft men were going to attempt to pack the convention. Unless Sol Sudranski and his Roosevelt supporters get busy they are liable to be snowed under by the student vote.

THE FEDERATION OF AGRICULTURIST

THE INDIANA STATE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY ADVOCATES AND PRESENTS PLAN FOR CO-OPERATION OF AGRICULTURAL ASSOCIATIONS.

HAZELETT, COMMITTEEMAN

The executive board of the Indiana Horticultural Society met Monday at the State House to discuss plans for furthering the proposed Federation of Agricultural Associations of Indiana. Delegates from the horticultural society were appointed to represent the organization at a meeting of the proposed federation some time in the near future. The committeemen are: R. M. Hazelett, Greencastle; W. B. Filck, Lawrence; J. C. Grossman, Lafayette; E. Y. Teas, Centerville; H. H. Swaim, South Bend; C. G. Woodbury, Lafayette; C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport; J. M. Cravens, Madison; Mason Niblack, Vincennes, and W. M. Walton, Laporte.

C. N. Lindley, of Salem, was appointed a director of the proposed organization, as provided for in a new constitution.

The executive board also discussed plans for holding another apple show in Indiana during the coming year, and a sum of money was set aside to pay the preliminary expenses of the undertaking. The exhibit may be held in Indianapolis and it may go to Louisville, Ky., members of the board said. Several Indiana cities have promised financial aid in bidding for the show, among them being South Bend and Fort Wayne. Persons interested in horticulture in several parts of the state have announced that other cities may take a hand in the bidding.

Where Are the "Teddy" Men?

Although the names of three Fifth District Republicans have been prominently mentioned as candidates for delegates to the National Convention there are no Roosevelt enthusiasts among them. W. R. McKeen of Terre Haute, John Mattern, a Hendricks county stockman, and Attorney S. A. Hays of Greencastle, have all been frequently mentioned as probable candidates. And all have announced themselves as Taft men. Many are wondering where Roosevelt is, going to come in.

GARDEN and FARM NOTES

Weeds along the fence are fine harbors for insects.
Long, straight garden rows make cultivation easier.
Asparagus should not be cut the first season at all.
Poultry droppings make fine fertilizer for the onion bed.
A plant of rhubarb once well established is good indefinitely.
The market price of commercial feeds is no indication of their real value.
Clean all home-grown seed and grade, so only the largest seed can be used.
Rhubarb or plantain is one of the perennials that should be in every garden.
Any time in the year is the right time to begin planning for an asparagus plot.
Lettuce and cabbage plants in the cold-frames must be given air every midday.
Sweet corn is a very profitable crop. One reason for this is because it is so easily handled.
The silo is now a necessity, and for you to compete with the man who has one you must have one, too.
It is always best to order the vegetable seeds early to insure prompt delivery and to get such variety as are wanted.
Fall plowing usually produces a better corn crop than spring plowing, the ground being mellowed by the frost and rain.
Every grain dealer, banker and business man should get busy and use every means possible to induce farmers to test every ear of their seed corn.

At Twelve O'Clock

By MARION GORDON

The Lawton's Hallowe'en party was in full swing at eleven o'clock. A pair of grinning, candle-illuminated pumpkins adorned the gate posts and the piazza was hung with smaller jack-o'-lanterns. Inside the house, walls and ceilings were hung with cobwebs cunningly fashioned from twine and from every corner there peered glassily staring owls and evil-looking witches, the latter accompanied by broomstick and black cats.

From a corner obscured by rough faggots from the forest, came the sound of stringed instruments. The orchestra was concealed there and dancing was going on. It was a costume party and the rooms were filled with whirling forms clothed in garments of fanciful beauty or grotesque absurdity of form or color. The various mismatched couples provoked much merriment. Mrs. Lawton, stout and jolly, was garbed as the unhappy Ophelia while her partner, Major Morse, a thin, dyspeptic-looking man, depicted Punchinello.

His Satanic Majesty danced with a demure little Quakeress, district messenger boys were paired off with medieval dames and the Knave of Hearts carried refreshments to Old Mother Hubbard and her faithful dog.

Now, contrary to tradition, Old Mother Hubbard was the prettiest girl in the gathering and she was far from being old in spite of the snuff-colored gown she wore with its enveloping white apron and dangling bunch of keys; for the mob cap sat coquettishly on her sunny hair and she could not keep the dimples from her pink cheeks and white chin, although she did try to maintain a sober demeanor.

"Mother Hubbard," said the Knave of Hearts as he dropped to one knee and presented a tray of ices, "I have no tarts but here is a biscuit for you, if you please."

Elsie Hilyer ate her ice daintily while the handsome Knave of Hearts, Arthur Beckman, sat down beside her with his own plate in his hand. In his present state of mind it was sufficient food and drink to gaze upon Elsie's loveliness, to watch the changing shadows on her face and harken to the sweet lilt of her voice.

"You didn't find a bone for my poor dog," she suddenly chided him, to break an embarrassing silence.

Arthur picked up the droll, stuffed dog that was perched on Elsie's lap and beat it emphatically against his knee. "Confound the dogs!" he complained bitterly. "Every time I've tried to speak seriously with you to night, Elsie, you've dragged poor Fido into the conversation. Why not give me a straight answer and—"

Elsie reached over and rescued the dog from his reckless hands. "That belongs to my little niece, Kitty Blair, and I promised Kitty that no harm should come to poor Fido. Is it not enough that poor Fido should be without his bone?"

"And put me out of my misery?" interrupted Arthur, relentlessly concluding his sentence.

Her face was rose pink as she bent it over the woolly dog. "I can't tell you just now—let us wait a while—until after the games. You haven't given me time to think."

Arthur's face lengthened. "If you want time to think it over," he said gravely, "I'm afraid I'm out of it—because if you really cared, you'd know right off."

"Wait until after the games?" she repeated in a low voice.

"Until after twelve o'clock?"

"Yes."

"And you will not escape—you will tell me then?"

"I will be here at a little after twelve," she murmured, and then another partner claimed her and she was gone without one glance from her soft brown eyes to comfort him or give him hope.

That was the last dance before the games and the entire company found seats and prepared to put to test all the legendary charms of Hallowe'en.

Partners were chosen and once more Arthur Beckman found himself beside the girl he loved.

Elsie's cheeks were deeply flushed and her eyes sparkled with some inward excitement. She was merry and gay until the charms were tested. Then a quietness settled down upon her like a filmy veil of sorrow, but occasionally she brushed it aside to smile or return a merry quip.

The charms were provokingly inauspicious for the furthering of Arthur Beckman's desires. All the crimson apple parings that Elsie tossed over her shoulder fell into obstinately curving W's instead of the A's that would indicate that Arthur was to be her future mate.

The melted lead when dropped in cold water took shape as a mortar and pestle, much to the secret satisfaction of Wilbert Lansing, who was a wholesale druggist and who interpreted the signs to mean that his long and heretofore hopeless wooing of Elsie Hilyer was to have a successful ending. Arthur Beckman was an architect and a mortar and pestle had no significance for him.

Then, when they placed chestnuts on the hearth in pairs, each one secretly naming his nuts, the one that bore a certain magic name that Elsie dared not whisper aloud, insolently hopped away and joined a fat little chestnut that belonged to her neighbor, Jack Monroe—and as Jack was desperately in love with plump and fair little Susie Agnew there was small doubt that his chestnut was named for Susie. If Fate decreed that Elsie's hero and Susie were to be mated—Elsie's smile quite faded away for all the signs were against her!

Of course they tried the mirror charm, some of the girls taking hand-mirrors and walking around the house backward were rewarded by seeing divers faces reflected in the glass. It was a moonlight night and the shrubbery cast lacy black shadows across the path that encircled the house. Outdoors there was much laughter and merriment.

Elsie did not join them. This last test she dared not try and so while the others played hide-and-seek in the crisp cool air after the midnight hour had passed, Elsie sought the alcove in the conservatory where she had promised to meet Arthur Beckman and give him his answer.

He arrived almost as soon as she did. He sat down beside her and took one cold little hand in his own.

"Now, Elsie?" he asked softly.

"Oh, Arthur," she trembled, "I—I can't."

"Well—never mind—don't cry about it," he said practically, for her voice was near to tears. His own heart was wrung with the bitterness of the moment. "Don't let it worry you one instant, dear. You needn't tell me why—I suppose it's another chap—would you like to join the ghost dance? The orchestra is tuning up." He tried to speak lightly but all the spirit had gone out of his voice.

Elsie shook her head. "You don't understand," she whispered, turning her head half toward him so that the soft fragrant masses of her hair brushed his cheek. "The signs were all against it!"

He hardly breathed, so fearful was he of losing this blissful moment, but her remark was puzzling.

"The signs? Oh, you mean those charms and all that clap-trap business of apple parings and melted lead and so forth?" he demanded.

"Yes—you see I wanted to wait and find out what Fate really had in store for me. I thought if the signs were propitious for my—my being happy with you I believed that together with—"

"She hesitated and turned away her head.

"Together with your love for me," he prompted softly and he was wildly happy when she did not deny it.

"Would insure our happiness," she completed.

"Fol de rol!" ejaculated the Knave of Hearts, taking Old Mother Hubbard in his arms so suddenly that the boneless dog bounced to the floor and rolled away. "Fol de rol, darling, I'll risk all the bad luck in the world in marrying you if you'll have me! Compared with the fact that I love you and you say you love me—why, the charm business doesn't cut any figure at all!"

At that instant came Wilbert Lansing of mortar and pestle fame: the Fate had decreed that he was to be Elsie's future spouse and he was eager to find her and press his suit once more. He was rather superstitious himself and the signs were auspicious for him.

Through the shielding palms he caught one glimpse of the Knave of Hearts and Old Mother Hubbard and he lost his belief in signs at once. As he turned away he saw the fat, stuffed, woolly dog of Mother Hubbard lying at his feet.

With a well directed kick he sent the poor beast flying across the floor, whence it bounded into the fountain and bobbed serenely around among the startled goldfish.

"Nothing in charms!" muttered Wilbert Lansing as he stalked gloomily home.

Cat's Long Walk to Old Home.

The story of a notable journey of a cat from Kingston, Surrey, England, to its former home at Glastonbury, in Somersetshire, a distance of about 133 miles, is now told by an astonished correspondent.

In April last a cat, mottled gray and described as half Persian in breed, was sent from Glastonbury, where it had been reared, to the matron of the Kingston Nursing home.

It was sent in a packing case drilled with air holes and obviously the animal had no opportunity of marking the points of its journey. Soon after arrival at Kingston the cat was lost, and despite the most diligent searching, no trace of it could be found.

The matron of the nursing home has now received a letter from Glastonbury stating that the cat has found its way back to its old home. It arrived emaciated and foot-sore and apparently had walked the whole of the 133 miles.

The letter describes the cat on its arrival as "a mere shadow of its former self" and expresses the belief that although terribly weak through its wanderings, it can be nursed back to a healthy condition.

His Future Plans.

She was a lady visitor to the prison, kindly and well meaning, and as she chatted with a burglar who had been sentenced to six months' imprisonment she thought she detected signs of reform in him.

"And now," she said, "have you any plans for the future, on the expiration of your sentence?"

"Oh, yes, ma'am," he said, hopefully. "I've got the plans of two banks and a post office."

Prepared for It.

"Hubby, I'm going in for the simple life awhile."

"All right, my dear," said hubby, as he reached for his checkbook. "How many gowns will that require?"

PROBLEM FOR THE SCIENTIST

How May the Energy of the Sun, at Present Largely Wasted, Be Utilized to Advantage?

The enormous energy which is constantly poured out by the sun is almost past the comprehension of the lay mind.

Measurements have shown that on a clear sunny day the sun transmitted to the earth energy which corresponded to about 7,000-horsepower per acre. At present all that is practically wasted. Attempts have from time to time been made to utilize this enormous supply of energy, but not with any great measure of success. If people only knew how to harness it they could, at the expense of lowering the temperature of the earth by a degree or so, obtain all the power necessary to perform the work of the world. Only about three-fifths of the energy sent to the earth from the sun is appreciable to the eye as light. If the sun were twice as hot as it is, four-fifths would be appreciable in that way, and if it were still hotter the whole of the energy would affect the eye as light. Radiant energy is not heat; that is, the energy of the sun does not reach the earth in the form of heat. It is not heat at all until it falls on bodies whose temperature can be raised. It might rather be called electricity; in fact, it is a form of electricity, for all the methods used to detect and measure radiant energy depend upon absorbing it and transforming it into heat.

Loans of Honor.

Tip never had a mite of patience with the fellow who looks with such reverence on a debt of honor. As a rule the debt of honor chap doesn't fret a bit about bilking his grocer. But an experiment with "loans of honor"—put in the right places—has shown the average person is honest. Several years ago public spirited men "got together" at Lyons and formed what they called a Loan and Honor society. The purpose was to furnish money to clerks, laborers and apparently to any poor and needy persons. No other security than the borrower's word was asked. In 1910-11 money was lent to 384 individuals. Sixty-eight of these were women. All but twenty-seven of the borrowers were married. Sickness made 119 of the loans necessary; loss of work, 83; previous debts, 84, and starting housekeeping, 27. The sums borrowed varied from $6 to $60. During its several years of existence the society has lost only $200. Yes, the average person is not a thief.—New York Press.

Lemon Sauce.

Squeeze and strain the juice from a large lemon into a saucepan, then add to it one large tablespoonful of butter, one teaspoonful of salt and a teaspoonful of pepper. Beat over a fire until thick and hot, but do not let it boil. When done, mix with the beaten yolks of two eggs and serve at once, either over the fish or in a separate sauce boat.

SUCCESS OF TEA GOWN SURE

Models Have Become So Elaborated That It Is Difficult to Reconcile Use of Name.

The evolution of the tea gown of late years has been one of the things to marvel over. So elaborated have some of the models become, it has been difficult to reconcile the use of the term "tea gown" at all in their connection, and prices have grown prohibitive. Fashion, however, rests satisfied to bring to consideration a practical style of tea gown that is at the same time sufficiently removed from the more ordinary class of rest gown to act as a home dinner dress.

Selection has fallen on velveteen, a delicate pewter gray for choice, trimmed with dark brown fur. Comparatively little fur is required, and beyond seeing that the color is the very darkest shade of brown, such as skunk, there is no particular necessity to indulge in a costly or even genuine pelt, a counterfeited presentment serving quite satisfactorily under the kindly influence of artificial light.

The cut of the upper part of this tea gown is Magyar, and is singularly happy, as is also the sweep of the back from the right shoulder to the left side of the waist, this resolving into the appearance of a broad box pleat that concludes in a square train. As a finish to the left-hand sleeve a little piece of real old lace should be requisitioned, or, failing that, a carefully tinted reproduction, a little handkerchief corner of lace again outlining the square décolletage. Where the skirt appears beneath the back pleat a few light folds are introduced, these at once dissipating any undue suggestion of heaviness, albeit the ensemble is suggestively slim and supremely elegant.

A Year of Intense Suffering.

Unwelcome Guest at Funeral.

It was only after great difficulty that the reptile was killed. The funeral service proceeded without further interruption.

TRAP IS EASY TO CONSTRUCT

Excellent for Extermination of Rats, Also to Catch Rabbits and Other Animals.

(By J. W. GRIFFIN.) Set the trap over a barrel that is partly filled with water, fasten the falling doors so that they will not fall and let the rats run through and around the trap for several nights—then pull out the nail that holds the doors, and you will catch every rat that has visited the trap.

Two boards ten inches wide and two feet long are used for the sides; one board two feet long and one foot wide for the top; two boards ten inches wide and one foot and six inches in length for the bottom or falling doors.

The falling doors should have tin fastened on the top side from where the pivots enter the sides to the end post to the bait; this will prevent the sharp claws clinging to the board and climbing back, when the doors fall.

The description by letter is as follows: A, bait; BB, on the dotted lines, shows the position of the falling doors when the game enters the lower part of the trap; CC, the entrance to the trap; DD, the nails that serve as pivots for the falling doors.

EE, nail-holes in which are the nails that hold the trap unset while the game is getting used to it. The bottom part of the trap—that which remains the game after trapping—should be made of hardwood or should be lined with roofing iron or tin.

The bait should be suspended with a small wire and should hang within two or three inches of the floor, or falling doors.

If the trap is neatly made and fitted out—so that all parts work well, there is not the least possible doubt as to the game it will capture (besides the rats one wishes to exterminate), such as rabbits, squirvia, opossums, raccoons, muskrats, in fact all animals that will eat of prepared bait.

In setting the trap, choose a place on a hillside, in a gully, or a small hollow so the entrance may be placed on a level with the earth, and the animals will have no trouble in entering.

Youthful Musical Genius. Rennes, a sleepy Brittany town, which is known in contemporary history chiefly because the second Dreyfus court-martial was held there, has recently discovered in its midst a musical prodigy. A local professor vouches for this discovery. Young Rene Guillou is aged seven. He is not only a virtuoso on the piano; he is also a composer. He possesses ear to a remarkable degree, and distinguishes every note in symphonic music. According to the master, he hears music inwardly. He composes for voices and instruments without making use of any instrument whatever, writing down melody and accompaniment on the paper.

PREPARATION OF CELERY BED

Plant Does Best in Moist, Mucky Soil and in Situations Where Water Supply is Abundant.

Sow celery in March, or beginning of April in rows in fine, rich soil, and, if dry enough, press the soil firmly with a roller or the back of the spade. Keep the seed bed well watered, as celery germinates very slowly. Transplant from June to August.

Celery does best in a moist, mucky soil, and in situations where plenty of water is abundant in the soil. It can be planted in single or double rows, earthing up as it grows two or three times, and in doing this, care should be taken not to let the earth get into the heart of the plant.

When severe cold weather comes, take up and transplant solidly in a bed close together, and cover gradually with leaves, hay or straw, as necessary to prevent freezing.

There is a good story going the rounds in the court house today regarding County Auditor Cornelius Airhart. It seems that among the questions asked in the eighth grade examination of the Greencastle township schools Saturday, under the supervision of Trustee George Landes, was one which asked the pupils to name three county officers and their duties. One lad, probably knowing that Mr. Airhart is a Baptist preacher, stated that the duties of the auditor was to preach and teach Sunday school.

LIFE VERSUS DEATH BREAD

Physician Claims Much for Preparation That He Asserts Has Renewed His Life.

The physician had once been a dyspeptic, sour and morose; but his color was now ruddy and clear, his spirits light, and his health excellent. "Death bread," he said, "laid me low. Death bread kept me a dyspeptic for ten long, sad years. And life bread has made me my own buoyant, healthy, happy self again."

"What do I mean by death bread? I mean ordinary bread. Why do I call it death bread? Because it is alive with putrefactive germs—because, by more than one authority, the yeast cells in it are said to be identical with the diseased cells of pus—and, therefore, are a poison."

"Yeast, in fact, is as unhealthy as its sickly smell and musty, slimy consistency would lead you to believe. It is a mass of living germs—and along with these are mingled putrefactive germs. Yeast is a very harmful thing. It makes bread a very harmful thing. All bread made with yeast is death bread."

"Life bread—that is what I eat. I make it myself. I take wheat of the finest quality, unground, and I roast it over a hot fire in a thick iron saucepan. The grains, an inch deep in the pan, are stirred continually. They pop, like popcorn, and, when all have popped—it is a matter of about ten minutes—my life bread is done."

"Each grain of this life bread is a loaf, a miniature, delicious loaf, brown and crisp, that falls to powder on being bitten. Life bread must be kept in airtight tins. It is the healthiest, the most nourishing, and the best-flavored bread in existence. But it must be confessed that the loaves are rather small."

TACTFUL VOTER WAS THIS

Simple Peasant Cast His Ballot to Accompaniment of Delicious Bit of Humor.

The simple people of Alsace, who retain in their hearts a strong love for France at the same time that they are desirous not to offend their German rulers too much, frequently have a hard time of it when they are brought to the ballot box to vote for representatives in the German parliament.

In one election in a certain Alsatian district the two candidates were Kable, an Alsatian of French sympathies, who had protested against the annexation after the war of 1870, and a German. On election day a peasant came to the polling place, which was presided over by a German official. The peasant had in one hand a ticket on which was printed the name of Kable, and in the other a ticket bearing the name of the German candidate.

"Mein Herr," he said to the German election official, "will you tell me which of these tickets is the better one?"

The officer looked at them. "Why, this is much preferable," said he, indicating the German's ticket.

"Ah, I thank you," answered the peasant. "I will keep it next my heart." He folded it carefully and put it inside his coat. "As for this other, then," said he, with an air of putting it away from him as an unworthy thing, "I will leave it here." And he put the Kable ticket in the ballot box.

Meant Their Work to Last.

Some of the early stones of Welsh slate in New England burial grounds show very fine carving, evidently the product of English rather than Colonial workmen. The enduring quality of these memorials is evident on a comparison between them and other stones put up at a much later date. In one of the old yards at Billerica, Mass., many of the stones of mid-eighteenth century dates are badly scaled and partially illegible, while the oldest stone in the yard, dated 1684, shows no serious effect of weather and others almost as old are equally plain; practically unchanged after two centuries of exposure to the New England climate.

Auto Took Long Jump.

With the ease of a veteran hunter taking a hurdle, a Sydney, N. S. W., taxicab recently cleared a 10½-foot ditch, landing on the opposite side with every tire burst, front doors telescoped, axles badly bent, and the framework strained and knocked out of gear. The chauffeur and inmates, however, were quite unhurt save for a severe shaking. Workmen were engaged in taking out a culvert on the road at this point, and had removed the decking. At noon they had left work to eat lunch in a nearby field; and it was at this juncture that the car came speeding along, the chauffeur failing to notice the condition of the road.

Bee Keeping for Women.

"Nothing could induce us to give up bee keeping for, aside from the profit, the larger returns of health and happiness, the pure joy of living in the sunshine and watching the tireless workers as they come in with loads of pollen and nectar outweigh any financial consideration," says a writer in Farmer's Wife.

To sum it all up bee keeping is pre-eminently a "woman's job" whether for pleasure or profit or for a combination of both. The financial returns compare favorably with anything else from farm or garden, while to those who love outdoor life bee keeping is the most fascinating of all avocations.
